A reading from the First Letter of Paul to the Corinthians

“For just as the body is one and has many members, and all the members of the body, though many, are one body, so it is with Christ. For in the one Spirit we were all baptized into one body—Jews or Greeks, slaves or free—and we were all made to drink of one Spirit.” (1 Cor 12:12-14)

For some, you have experienced others prejudging or assuming who you are. I know I have. If I were to list the many ways others have assumed something about me, and still do to this day, I would need all day to do it. Yet, my mother, who experienced far worse in her life, as an immigrant to Canada, has taught me to never let others label you and let their ignorance become the reason things don't work out as you plan. She taught me to see the importance of how faith in God plays the central role in building one's character and how to see the world, even with all its obstacles, as opportunities to use one's gifts to build a disciplined and honest life where it becomes less about the funds in your bank account and more about who you served and helped to find God. Even to where you have empathy and pity for those who can only live and see their life and those of others through the lens of gender, race, politics, and religion.

Today, St. Paul reminds us, this is how God calls each of us to live our lives. Each of us has a purpose, a unique gift, and a reason to live a life worthy of being a brother and sister in Christ. From there, we will have the eyes to see how God sees each of us, as being one whole person, each with unique talents, to serve God and others. Let us pray never to forget to see each other through the eyes of faith, as friends and not enemies. Let us continue to pray for the families in Pakistan who dealing with famine and displacement after floods. For peace in Ukraine. I pray you remember that of course may the word of Jesus at the Ascension, resound in your heart and lips, “remember I am with you always till the end of days. Amen. In the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. Amen.
